Every year, the waste production of French people is about 320 kg per person (about 90 bags) with 120kg of organic waste that could be recovered. For instance, they can be used as fertilisers for crops

It is quite simple to compost our organic waste in the countryside. In the urban areas, where $\frac{3}{4}$ of the French population lives, it is more complicated. Thus, the potential of waste composting is very important.

The compost production from organic waste encourages the cultivation of vegetables and fruits at home. In urban areas, the objectives are diverse:
