

Translations:Le biofiltre/34/en-gb

The biofilter uses an active flow of liquid (water + organic matter) which acts as an 'oxygenating fountain' by cascading onto beds which are made of microporous and aerated material such as volcanic rock, pumice stone or expanded clay balls and beds made of aerated materials high in cellulose such as straw, dried grass, dried reeds etc. suitable for the growth of fungi.